Preface

THE pleasant task of writing a monograph on the Chelsea Scent-bottles, Etuis, Bonbonnières and Seals that I set myself some six years ago I have at length completed. Although many books have been recently published dealing with Ceramics, until the publication of Mr. W. King's "Chelsea Porcelain" we had no work dealing exclusively with the product of the Chelsea factory.

On the fascinating trinkets discussed in this monograph little has hitherto been written.

When I began this book I thought that it might be possible to trace about 300 models requiring at the most about 30 plates, but owing to the great kindness of many private collectors in giving me access to their collections a considerably larger number have been recorded. Thus I have now been able to extend my work to 58 plates illustrating over 500 models.

The coloured illustrations are produced from hand paintings, as so much detail is lost by direct photography. I think they will be found to accurately portray the wonderful variety and exquisite taste of the original models. Twenty of these plates are the work of Miss O. F. Tassart and Mr. H. Haase, and for the remaining twenty-seven I am responsible.

For much helpful work my best thanks are due to Mr. R. L. Hobson and Mr. W. Winkworth, of the British Museum, in dealing with the collection of Sir A. Wollaston Franks; to Mr. B. Rackham and Mr. W. King, of the Victoria and Albert Museum; to Mr. F. A. Harman Oates, of the London Museum, which contains the Joicey collection; and to Dr. Sauerlandt, of the Hamburg Museum. To the many private owners of Chelsea Toys in giving me permission to reproduce in this book models from their collections I am very grateful.

I should like especially to record the kindness of Mrs. Meyer Sassoon, the late Mrs. Salting, Mrs. A. E. Marlow, Mr. T. Galsworthy and Herr O. Blohm, all of whom have placed their wonderful collections at my disposal. I am also greatly indebted to Dr. H. Bellamy Gardner for much valuable help, and to Mr. R. Copeland for allowing me to reproduce the Chelsea Master Models.

I have postponed the publication of this work in order to make it as complete as possible. The time has now come when I must send it to the Press.

The years will, doubtless, bring to light other beautiful models scattered over this country and the continent. I must leave it to others to do justice to them. If my book is the means of discovering other models, and awakening their fortunate owners to a sense of their beauty, I feel that I shall not have laboured in vain.

The author desires to express his most grateful thanks to the following Museums and Owners of Private Collections, whose generosity in lending specimens has made this work possible :

General History and Introduction

COLLECTORS of Chelsea Toys will at once see that the chief materials for this book have been gathered from the collections in our public museums. The British Museum gives us the collection of Sir A. Wollaston Franks, the Victoria and Albert Museum that of Lady Schreiber, the London Museum the Joicey collection, and these with the private collections of Mrs. Meyer Sassoon, Mrs. A. E. Marlow and the late Mrs. Salting are the foundations of my book.

I do not propose to go into many details of the history of the Chelsea factory, as this has recently been fully dealt with by Mr. W. King in his "Chelsea Porcelain."

The periods I am adopting are those laid down by Mr. R. L. Hobson in his Catalogue of English Porcelain in the British Museum.

Period I.	Incised Triangle Mark	1745-1750
,, II.	Raised Anchor Mark	1750-1753
,, III.	Red Anchor Mark	1750-53-1758
,, IV.	Gold Anchor Mark	1759-1769
,, V.	Derby Chelsea	1770-1784

The earliest evidence that we have of the factory's existence is the "Goat and Bee Jug" with the incised Triangle and Chelsea 1745, on the underside of the base.

From the year 1749 the history of the factory becomes less obscure. The following is an extract from Mr. R. Blunt's introductory note to the Catalogue of the Chelsea Exhibition, June, 1924 :—

"Charles Gouyn (probably a Frenchman), the earliest manager whose name is recorded, appears to have been succeeded about 1749 by Nicholas Sprimont, a French silversmith, who acted as manager for the Duke of Cumberland and Sir Everard Fawkener till about 1758, when, on Sir Everard's death, he became sole proprietor, continuing, though with intermittent years of illness and inactivity, during which Francis Thomas carried on the business till 1769, when the factory was sold to James Cox, who re-sold it in the following February to William Duesbury and John Heath, of Derby. Duesbury continued the Chelsea factory through the seventies, when the expiration of his lease raised the question of transferring the works to Derby; but he held on for three more years in Lawrence Street, and it was not till 1784 that the moulds, ovens and plant were moved to Derby, and the buildings at Chelsea demolished."

The porcelain varies considerably at different stages of the factory's existence, and can be divided roughly into the periods as mentioned above, which though necessarily overlapping to some extent, are sufficiently clearly defined for practical purposes, and are indicated by distinctive marks in the larger pieces.

As regards colours Mazarine Blue—Gros Bleu was introduced in 1756. Pea Green in 1759 and Claret and Turquoise in 1760. It is remarkable how few authentic records have been handed down to us dealing with the history of the factory as in spite of its short career, it was undoubtedly a brilliant success.

I. SCENT BOTTLES

I now propose to consider the Chelsea Scent-bottles. The more one sees of these charming bottles the more one is astonished at the marvellous modelling and the detail and taste displayed. These old Chelsea craftsmen never shirked their work. Detail scarcely visible to the eye has been fashioned with the most careful and painstaking accuracy. The concave base with its bouquet of flowers in colour, or its pattern of flowers and leaves in chased gold, the dainty stoppers in keeping with the design of the scent-bottle (alas) so often missing, all show that perfection of form and colour which denotes the work of the great artist.

These scent-bottles, as perhaps is not generally known, were carried by the ladies of the 18th century in their coaches, and were used on a dusty journey. They were enclosed in shagreen cases, and to this fortunate fact, we probably owe their survival to delight us after 150 years.

To my knowledge there is only one scent-bottle known to be dated, and this is in the Franks Collection in the British Museum and reproduced here on Pl. 15 fig. 1, the date 1759 is on the letter which Cupid disguised is writing: so this scent-bottle was made in the first year of the Gold Anchor Period. I have seen another model of this but the letter is undated. It is probable that the earliest scent-bottles were made before 1754, such as the white model in the form of a pilgrim bottle with oblong base, four-sided neck, and on the shoulders ram's heads in relief, from which are festooned vine stems with foliage Pl. 27, fig. 2. Also the "Woman nursing a Child" in the Schreiber Collection figured here on Pl. 27, fig. 3.

This scent-bottle appears to me to be the same date as the white figures of a man with a hurdy-gurdy, and the woman on the swing, recently added to the Victoria & Albert Museum Collection. Compare the modelling of the leaves.

The scent-bottles with facetted sides imitating cut glass Pl. 1, figs. 1 and 3, with painted landscapes and flowers in the Oriental style belong to the Raised Anchor Period, and the simple pear-shaped bottles with flattened side and beautifully painted with river scenes and flowers, to the early Red Anchor Period. Most of those modelled in the form of birds with the head forming the stopper were early, probably the same period as the Raised Anchor birds, and the simple models in subdued colours of the Monks and Nuns undoubtedly belong to the Red Anchor Period, and the majority of the scent-bottles with a bouquet of flowers painted in colours on the underside of the concave base also belong to this period. But there is another type of flower painting on the concave base which must be distinguished from these, having a single large pink rose with leaves, which belong to a later period, and will be mentioned later.

The early scent-bottles up to the Gold Anchor Period have the base deeper, so that they are more concave underneath, the intention being that these should be mounted with a lid and form a patch box. I have only seen a very few mounted in this way. The concave base of the Gold Anchor Period scent-bottles is as a rule shallow and not suitable to be mounted in this way. Of the rose pattern group I have seen one mounted with a seal, Pl. 9, fig. 6. A large number belong to the Gold Anchor Period, with very slight gilding on some and rich colouring, and with a gold pattern of flowers and leaves, and a green serrate pattern round the rim on the underside of the concave base. A few belong to the Derby Chelsea Period, and I have succeeded in tracing all the models mentioned by Jewitt, Vol. I., Ceramic Art. "Weekly Bills 1770-73," pp. 179-180. "The Boy catching a Squirrel," "The Boy catching Birds," and "The Boy bird-nesting," Pl. 16, figs. 2, 3 and 4. These are all typical of the Chelsea Gold Anchor Period which rather goes to prove that the Derby Chelsea of that period had no Derby influence in it. On the other hand these models may have been copied again in the Derby Chelsea Period and are unknown to me, and that these three figured on Pl. 16 are actually Chelsea of the 1760 period. It shows what a lot we may still have to learn in regard to this period of the factory, and it is dangerous to lay down the law, as new models may come to light and upset our theories, but these somewhat vague speculations may be helpful in elucidating matters. The scent-bottle of the "Doves Billing," Pl. 19, fig. 3, and the bonbonnière of "Cupid and the Lamb," Pl. 47, fig. 3, are undoubtedly the models referred to in Jewitt, Vol. I., p. 181, Weekly Accounts from 1770-73.

"21 Snuff-boxes of 'Cupid and Lamb,' £1 4s. 6d." p. 183, "Painting smelling-bottles over work, viz.:—1 ditto Double Doves at 1s. - 1s."

It is interesting to trace the hand of the same workman in some of these models. The scent-bottle Pl. 16, fig. 5, with the gardener holding a basket of fruit most beautifully modelled is evidently by the same artist as the little bonbonnière Pl. 47, fig. 8 with the same fruit modelled on the lid and the motto in red, "Cueilli (sic) pour la plus belle." Some of the scent-bottles are to be found in Battersea enamel, the one modelled with Plums, Pl. 12, fig. 6, is found in Battersea in the Schreiber Collection, Victoria and Albert Museum, No. 1730, also that of the Gardener carrying a basket of flowers on his head, Pl. 15, fig. 2, is found in Battersea, Schreiber Collection, Victoria and Albert Museum, No. 1728, and of the large model of the Two Doves illustrated by E. Braun, Kunst and Kunsthandwerk, 1915, p. 73, fig. 60, there is a Battersea model in the British Museum Collection, and there is a fragment of a wax squeeze of this Chelsea bottle among the Copeland moulds.

The scent-bottle of the Boy and Goat, Pl. 15, fig. 4, appears to be one of the best known models, and I have seen about twelve of these, and they vary much in quality, a good many are left plain white, and they are constantly to be found mentioned in auction catalogues, and when white often classified as Bow. There is a clumsy model of this design made at Gera in the Frank Collection, British Museum, this has the base concave underneath and marked with a G. This model was also made at Höchst, see Braun Cicerone II., Pl. 1, p. 20. Practically no two bottles from the same mould are finished in the same way, there is no uniformity in the applied detail, one may have flowers in relief and another fruit in relief, and hardly two bottles are coloured in the same way.

I have seen no signs of any bearing a mark, in the form of an Anchor or impressed mark, but the statuettes of Gardeners, etc., are to be found marked with the double Red Anchor.

Jewitt, Ceramic Art, p. 193, fig. 380, gives a figure "of an elegant little scent-bottle with the Raised Anchor mark," which is in reality nothing but a small vase of Chinese form, and is now in the Schreiber Collection, Victoria and Albert Museum, No. 236. This statement of Jewitt's is misleading, as there is no Chelsea scent-bottle known to bear a mark.

With regard to the mottoes on the scent-bottles these are of a gallant or sentimental nature, in more or less incorrect French. The early scent-bottles up to the end of the Red Anchor period are without mottoes on the base, which is as a rule decorated with sprigs of flower painting. The models in the form of Monks of this period when reading a book sometimes have a Latin motto in red on the page. The Gold Anchor Period scent-bottles have French mottoes in red, but never on the upper side of the base, these are either painted on the underside round the gold leaf pattern, or on a ribbon or strap round the figure subject, or some object they may be holding. The late Rose pattern group has the motto as a rule in black round the base which is plain white, if the base is coloured green it has no motto.

It appears that they must have had at the factory one or two exceptionally clever modellers, who specialised in these small pieces, most certainly Frenchmen, and the mis-spelling of the mottoes, to my mind, goes to prove that these are certainly a product of an English and not a French factory. These were painted by English hands working at the factory, and we know that later in 1770, from Jewitt, who gives the weekly accounts, that the mottoes were painted by Boarman, Wollams and Jinks, and it is probable that they were working before this date under Sprimont, before Duesbury took over the factory. Some of the models are of very French appearance, such as the Woman standing by a Clock, Pl. 19, fig. 2, and in some the paste is very white and glassy and of smooth even texture, but it is natural that the paste should vary enormously as they were constantly experimenting in their effort to improve it.

This is rather borne out by the following paragraph in the Handmaid to the Arts (Vol. ii., pt. iv., Chap. II., p. 355) published in 1764, an anonymous work ascribed to Robert Dossie, which may allude to the Chelsea factory.

". . . . A very opposite kind is produced in another manufactory in the neighbourhood of London, for it has great whiteness and a texture that admits or it being modelled or cast in the most delicate manner; but it is formed of a composition so vitrescent as to have almost the texture of glass, and consequently to break or crack if boiling water is suddenly poured upon it, which quality renders it unfit for any uses but the making of ornamental pieces."

There is a group of scent-bottles of this type of paste which stand alone, of extremely white paste, and painted with a rose pattern; on the underside of the base is painted a large pink rose and leaves, and the mottoes as a rule are painted in black, Pl. 23, and they have no gilding. The model of Cupids at a Furnace, Pl. 23, fig. 4, which belongs to this group I have seen with the base plain white with the motto in black, and also with the base coloured a yellowish green without a motto, and the same applies to other models. I believe this group of scent-bottles to have been made either after the Gold Anchor period, or the isolated output of one artist during that period.

The early type of scent-bottle as a rule was made so that the head of the figure formed the stopper. We find this in the early Cupids, see Pl. 10, fig. 1, and the birds and animals, see Pl. 5, with the exception of the Doves billing. In the early scent-bottles in the form of Monks and Nuns, the heads do not form the stopper, with the exception of the "Monk carrying in provender to the monastry," of which I have seen no English model, see Binns, English Porcelain, p. 42, and King, Chelsea Porcelain, Pl. 45, fig. 2; these were probably made at the end of the Red Anchor period, and the stoppers were formed with green leaves and red berries, which is typical of the period, in the large figures.

With regard to the metal mounts for the scent-bottles, we see in the 1754 advertisement that these were mounted and unmounted, so we presume that some were mounted at the Factory. The scent-bottles have a fairly uniform type of mount, but the bonbonnières vary considerably, and a great number remain unmounted at the present time, especially the late type such as "Cupid and the Lamb." The lids are made of Battersea enamel painted with flower sprays, agate, etc., and I know of no lid made of porcelain. On the other hand the French bonbonnières, such as Mennecy have a uniform type of contemporary silver mount, and are fitted with porcelain lids. It is, I think, impossible to mistake a Chelsea bonbonnière for a Mennecy one, as the paste and decoration and modelling is very different. I can see no reason for ascribing any of the Chelsea ones to Mennecy, as the dealers are so fond of doing, and it is very doubtful if Mennecy ever made any scent-bottles. It is of interest to note how many undoubted Chelsea models were catalogued in auction sales about the middle of the 19th century as Sèvres and Mennecy. The Chelsea scent-bottles are of course naturally French in appearance, having been designed and made by Frenchmen working at Chelsea, and bearing French mottoes, but the paste and glaze is very different. There is no record that I know of that Mennecy made scent-bottles, but there is a record that these were made at the Crépey-en-Vallois Factory. The Factory was run by a man from Mennecy, and turned out enormous quantities of small articles, tobacco boxes, étuis, etc., catering rather for the demi-monde of Paris, hence shapes of female legs, etc., in addition to numerous cats and other animals. We know that Chelsea never deigned to make anything crude or in bad taste, but E. Braun, in Kunst und Kunsthandwerk, 1915, p. 70, fig. 48, states "that this is typical of the broad English humour." I should much doubt this being Chelsea, and it will probably prove to belong to the Crépey factory. In the sale of the factory's products in 1766, on the 11th Dec. Chavagnac and Grollier "Porcelaines de France" occurs the item (inter alia) "quatre petits flacons, deux en couleur avec filets d'or." It is the custom of dealers to sell these bibelots as Mennecy, as Crépey would mean nothing to the average collector.

All the English scent-bottles are unmarked, but among the German ones, there are many that are marked and may easily be referred to a particular Factory. The modellers of the early period of Meissen took their ideas for the scent-bottles from the gold and silver scent-bottles of the late Louis XIV. period, and it is obvious that some of the Chelsea bottles have a French origin in design, and some have panels painted with Watteau subjects. Very few are actually founded on Meissen models, and the Chelsea models with figures and groups of children, are more elaborate and attractive than the German figure subjects. The idea for the Chelsea model of the Japanese lady with a parasol is founded on a Meissen statuette, "Festive Publication, Meissen, 1910, p. 55, f. 122," and the bottle in the form of a wine-flask is founded on a Fürstenburger Flacon of the same design, some painted with river scenes are also in the Meissen spirit. The origin of the Priests, Monks, Nuns and Harlequins is probably to be found in Meissen, and perhaps the Cupids, but the majority are undoubtedly original productions, modelled by a few artists who specialised in these small pieces. I know of three founded on Æsop's Fables, "The Fox and the Stork," "The Fox and Hound" and "The Fox and Crow."

II. EXTRACTS FROM J. E. NIGHTINGALE

Early English Porcelain, 1881. p. X.

"The following advertisement appears in the Public Advertiser from Nov. 23rd to Dec. 21st, 1754. The collection was apparently confined to Porcelain Toys and the smaller objects of value then made at Chelsea; the sale extended over five days."

By Order of the Proprietors of the Chelsea Porcelain Manufactory.

To be Sold by Auction

By Mr. Ford.

At his great Room in St. James', Haymarket, on Monday, the 16th December, and the following days.

All the entire Stock of Porcelain Toys, brought from their Warehouse in Pall Mall; consisting of Snuff-boxes, Smelling Bottles, Etwees and Trinkets for Watches (mounted in gold and unmounted) in various beautiful shapes, of an elegant design, and curiously painted in Enamel.

The said Stock may be view'd, and Catalogues had, at Mr. Ford's, on Wednesday, the 11th of December, and the following days, Sunday excepted, till the Time of Sale, which will begin each day at half an hour after eleven o'clock.

Nothing of the above kind was in their former sale, nor will any thing of the same sort as in this be sold from the Manufactory till after next year. A large Parcel of Porcelain Hafts for table and Dessert Knives and Forks."

At the time of sale, the following addition was made to the advertisement :—

"Most of the above things are in Lots suitable for Jewellers, Goldsmiths, Toy-shops, China-shops, Cutlers, and workmen in these branches of business."

J. E. NIGHTINGALE, p. XIV.

"At this time they continued to make those charming miniature smelling-bottles and étuis, frequently mounted in gold and sometimes set with precious stones, which have now become very scarce and fetch very large prices; none of these costly objects appear in the sale catalogue of this year, indeed it is probable that many of the finer productions of Chelsea did not find their way at all into the auction-room, but were purchased or ordered from the warehouse or manufactory. It would seem also that a good many of the best products of Chelsea were exported, as appears from the following advertisement in the Public Advertiser of April 3rd, 1756, and several times repeated :—

To be Sold by Auction

By Mr. Gelley,

At the Great House, in Great Marlborough Street.

The entire Stock of Messrs. Laumas and Rolyat, late of Lisbon, Merchants, consisting of one hundred double dozen of Chelsea China Knives and Forks, silver mounted, several dozen of China Smelling-bottles, mounted in gold and unmounted with stones of several sorts, as Diamonds, Rubies, &c."

III. EXTRACTS FROM CHRISTIE'S CATALOGUES

In order to see if it was possible to trace the existence of Chelsea scent-bottles unknown to me, I have taken the trouble to go through the Catalogues of Messrs. Christie, Manson and Woods Auction Sales, from 1858-1924. This has been no light task, but has been of great value, in showing the models appearing at auction during the course of 66 years, and during this period several large collections have been dispersed, and one gains a good idea of the number of models which do exist, and I feel as I have this material it is as well to publish it in the form of a catalogue, as it may be of value at some future date. Many undoubted Chelsea models have been catalogued as Meissen, Sèvres, Mennecy and Bow, and I include these when I think they may be Chelsea. Those marked * are probably Mennecy. I also include the prices paid at auction, but these have little value, as one has no idea of the condition of the piece, but we can gather from the prices paid, that these small pieces have always been much sought after and prized. I also include the prices paid at the Bernal Sale in 1855.

Plate 9

Four periods are illustrated on this plate, and four concave bases showing the different type of decoration. (I.) The base white with a bouquet of flowers in colour, early Red Anchor Period. (II.) Decorated with birds, very unusual and probably connecting the Red Anchor and Gold Anchor Periods. (III.) Decorated with a spray of flowers and leaves in gold, Gold Anchor Period. (IV.) Decorated with a pink rose and leaves, an outstanding group which I take to be verging on the Derby Chelsea Period, or at the end of the Gold Anchor Period, on the evidence of the seal "Indian boy with a hand-screen," made about 1770, same paste and decoration.

1. Scent-bottle in the form of two boys building a house with playing cards; one holds the two of clubs in his hand, they are seated by a white brick pedestal, the boy on the right wears a black hat, red coat, white waistcoat and blue breeches, the boy on the left has a white jacket with pink collar and cuffs, with a pink and blue pattern, and yellow breeches; the neck of the bottle has flowers and leaves in relief, floral stopper with metal mounts, the base is green with flowers in relief, concave underneath with green border, decorated with a spray of flowers in gold. A clay squeeze of this seal is among the Copeland moulds, pl. 33, fig. 7.

2. Scent-bottle in the form of Cupid standing at a grindstone sharpening a dart. The grindstone is painted with scattered pink roses and green leaves, a green barrel is placed above the stone at the back, and in front there is a man's mask with water flowing from the mouth on to the stone. Cupid stands working the stone with his left foot, a quiver hung at his left side and a pink robe thrown over his right arm. A spotted dog is seated on the base which is white, with the motto in black, "L'APRETE MON DARD," concave underneath and painted with a pink rose and leaves. The stopper is formed of a swan with metal mount. H. 3·1 ins.

3. Scent-bottle with two stoppers, in the form of a man trying to embrace a girl who is seated with a birdcage on her lap. She is seated by a rose-tree, holding a bird-cage on her lap with her left hand, and with her right she is restraining her lover, she wears a white dress cut low at the neck, painted with pink roses and leaves. He stands beside another branch of the rose-tree, his right hand on the birdcage, and his left on her shoulder. He wears a black hat, with the brim white underneath, a mauve smock with yellow sleeves with blue cuffs, a blue sash round his waist, black knee breeches and white stockings. The base is white with the motto in black, "C'EST L'AMOUR QUI M'INSPIRE," the rim has a wavy green edge, concave underneath with a pink rose and leaves. The necks of the two bottles are formed by the branches of the rose-tree, and each stopper is formed of a rose with metal mounts. H. 4·1 ins.

In the collection of Mrs. C. H. T. Hawkins.

4. Scent-bottle in the form of two masqueraders. A masked Harlequin is standing by a tree trunk which forms the neck of the bottle, he holds in his right hand a melon from which a slice has been cut, which he holds out to a seated lady, she wears a miniature hat on her head, a yellow bodice cut low, white sleeves and skirt painted with pink roses and leaves, in her right hand she holds a wine-glass above her head, and in her left a wine-bottle. The stopper is formed of a Dove, pecking at a bunch of grapes and green leaves, metal mounts. The base is white, with the motto in black, "TOUJOURS GAY." Concave underneath, painted with a pink rose and leaves. H. 4 ins.

IV. CHELSEA MASTER MODELS

Through the kindness of Mr. Ronald Copeland, I am able to reproduce several plates, showing the Lead and Wax Master Models of the scent-bottles, and Clay Squeezes of the Seals and Toy Statuettes illustrated in this work. Many of these were exhibited with the kind permission of Mr. Copeland, by Messrs. Stoner and Evans at the recent Chelsea Exhibition, Mr. Frank Stoner having sorted and arranged these after a visit to the Copeland Factory at Stoke-on-Trent. These have been lying at the Factory for many years, and were originally bought by Alderman William Copeland, at one time Lord Mayor of London, from Boyle, who had purchased them in 1849, when the entire contents of the Old Derby Works were sold. This interesting revival of these long hidden moulds, has been of great value, and settles beyond dispute the English origin of many of the scent-bottles, especially of the so-called Mennecy group, as we find a Lead Master Model of the "Masqueraders," one of the Rose Pattern group, see pl. 30, fig. 6, so we can safely ascribe this group to Chelsea or Derby Chelsea.

These Lead and Wax Master Models represent scent-bottles of the Red Anchor, Gold Anchor, Rose Pattern group and Derby Chelsea Periods, and I only say Derby Chelsea, as six of these scent-bottles which are known to me are typically Gold Anchor, but were mentioned by Jewitt in the Weekly Bills, 1770-73, which probably only means they continued to make these models in that period, seven being mentioned:—Boy catching a squirrel, pl. 16, fig. 3; Cupid forging hearts, pl. 25, fig. 2; Boy with bird's nest, pl. 16, fig. 2; Bird Catchers, pl. 16, fig. 4; Boy piping with a dog, pl. 14, fig. 2; Cupid booted and spurred (unknown); Double Doves, pl. 19, fig. 3; and it is highly probable that these moulds were never used at Derby.

The object of the Lead Master Model is to preserve a copy of the original model, as when a figure or group is modelled for reproduction in porcelain, moulds or casts are taken of its various parts, the process destroying the original model, so that as the casts become worn they can be renewed from the lead master model. The size of the original model is greater than the finished scent-bottle in porcelain by about $\frac{1}{4}$ to $\frac{1}{5}$th, due to the great shrinkage in the process of firing. The heads, arms, etc., are as a rule cut off and moulded separately, and then stuck on with slip, and all the detail in relief, such as flowers, fruit, leaves, etc., is modelled separately and applied later, this accounting for the great variety apparent in the finish of the same model. The finished article loses a certain amount of sharpness, compared with the original model, but this as a rule in no way detracts from its beauty.

See F. Stoner, Chelsea Moulds, "The Connoisseur," May 1924, pp. 3-10.

V. SEALS

The number of different models of Seals which I have now been able to bring together is of great interest, amounting to over 200. They can be divided into several groups, but are difficult to date with any certainty. With the exception of Jewitt we have no early records to rely on, these small pieces not occurring in the early sale catalogues of the Factory's products. The early and true Chelsea Seals have white bases, concave underneath, with the underside not glazed over, and with a hollow running through from the head to the base for mounting with a gold ring ; as a rule they have French mottoes in red, and occasionally in black, on the upper surface of the base, and if without a motto they generally have a sprig of flower painting. They consist of a great number of models of Cupids, many disguised ; small figures, birds and animals ; some are left plain white, and many of the subjects are founded on the scent-bottles. The early seals were better modelled, more simply coloured and with a better glaze than those of the later period.

Seals were produced in the Derby-Chelsea Period as we see from the list quoted by Jewitt. Ceramic Art of Great Britain, Vol. I. pp. 180-181, where twenty-four models are given, of these at present I can only recognise about thirteen, and it is evident that all of them were much as in the Chelsea Period, as they bore mottoes. These were made in the early Derby-Chelsea Period, and we then find a later group, with green bases with a gold rim, and much heavier colouring of scarlet, mauve and purple, all typical heavy Derby colours. Among these we find the same model with the base concave underneath, or solid and glazed over, as the "Huntsman blowing a horn," in the Schreiber Collection, with solid base, and in the Bellamy Gardner Collection, with a concave base, also "Cupid riding on a lion," concave and solid. This latter seal was evidently modelled three times, as we find an early Chelsea model in the Joicey Bequest, Victoria and Albert Museum, and another in the author's collection, with a white base, with a motto in red, "AMOR VINCET OMNIA." This is a larger seal than the later ones, and Cupid is holding his bow in a different position. Some of these later seals are no doubt founded on the early models, but I think are from different moulds, and they can be recognised at once by a heavier type of colouring than that used at Chelsea, even the Cupids having the flesh tints much stronger, and we find fewer Cupids, and more sportsmen and gaily dressed figures. I thought at one time I had discovered a clue to periods, from the motto being painted in red or black, but this has since broken down, and I have found the same model with either colour.

There is a small group of seals that have shallow flat bases, solid underneath and painted with a cinquefoil in a blue green, or mottled with green, these have mottoes in red or black and are probably late Chelsea. Many of the earlier type of seals have slight gilding on them, but the birds and animals have none, and are probably the earliest. There is another small group which is puzzling, these are beautifully modelled, and the paste is very white and somewhat translucent, they are painted in delicate pale colours, with an unusual blue edging to the frills round their necks and trimming of their clothes without any gold, the bases are shallow and slightly concave. One of these, the "Boy playing the flute," pl. 39, fig. 20, is an exact copy of the scent-bottle, pl. 25, fig. 1, made of the same paste and of similar colouring, and we now have proof that these are Chelsea, as a clay squeeze of this seal of the "Boy with the flute" has been discovered among the Copeland moulds, pl. 33, fig. 7. Most of the models of this group have rather large heads and wear dominos, and are evidently the work of one artist, and bear the stamp of an individual.

I have at last traced the model quoted in Jewitt, Vol. I., p. 180, of the "Indian boy with a handscreen." I have seen two models of this, pl. 37, fig. 6, but in both cases the screen is broken and only the handle remains, but the rim of the screen can be traced by the mark on the boy's cheek. From this model one is able to see the type of seal made at that period and this type has certainly no Derby influence in it, it is finely modelled, with good glaze and simple colouring, with the base white and motto in black, and painted with the rose pattern, corresponding to the type of scent-bottle with the rose pattern, so it is clearly evident that all these came after the Gold Anchor Period. Another interesting seal showing another period of pure Derby Chelsea is shown on pl. 37, fig. 18. It has the typical washy pink on the brickwork, and the concave base is marked underneath with a cursive N in mauve, corresponding to the impressed N found on Derby-Chelsea.

There is an interesting record given by Bemrose in a "Descriptive Catalogue of Porcelain and other Art Objects," 1898, p. 4.

33. Chelsea Trinkets, upwards of fifty, consisting of étui-stoppers, seals, breloques, miniature vases, dog's heads, and shoes, as watch pendants, etc., circa 1771. Thirty-nine of these were purchased from John Whittaker, an old Derby hand, who remembers, when a youth, several casks full of trinkets being at the old Derby works, having been brought from Chelsea on the transference of the plant and stock to Derby in 1784."

Also on p. 5.

"From the Chelsea and Derby documents I find that in an inventory of the moulds and models belonging to Duesbury, in 1795, there were :—

300 trinkets and seals (200), no model, valued at £46 0 0
100 Seal trinkets, valued at £25 0 0
50 Smelling-bottle figures (Chelsea) £6 5 0

That Mr. Miller, in 1794, purchased :

24 Vase trinkets, blue and gold, £1 14 0
4 doz. and 6 „ „ „ „ £3 16 0"

It is rather astonishing when we think of casks full of trinkets. We see that these were sent up to Derby from Chelsea in the white, and this may account for some of the late type of seals with the green base and heavy colouring. However, a great number of these heavily decorated seals are not models that are now known to us as early Chelsea models, though, of course, there may have been other Chelsea models of which we have no examples. The number of seals that were made from 1754 onward must have been very great, and it is remarkable what a comparatively small number of these have survived, when we consider the large number of models known to us to-day. They evidently came in for some hard usage, and were too fragile to be worn, and hence their disappearance. The great majority that do survive are often imperfect, and when unmounted are chipped round the base.

We learn from W. Bemrose, Bow, Chelsea and Derby Porcelain, p. 120, that "many China trinkets, such as seals, smelling-bottles, toothpick cases, etc., were mounted in gold, etc., at Derby, by Mr. Severne and others, from the middle of last century [18th century] until the early part of the present century. It may not be generally known that about the time the Derby China works came into note, the jewellery trade of Derby was a most important one. A jeweller named Simpson was one of the earliest manufacturers ; he employed about thirty hands. Severne & Co. gave employment to eighty or ninety hands, besides outworkers."

We can gather from this that the same class of work would have been done by the London jewellers during the period of the Chelsea factory, although we have no record of the name of any London firm, but it is practically certain that most of the Chelsea trinkets must have been mounted outside the factory.

Where I can trace the model referred to I place the Plate No. and Fig. in brackets for reference.

VI. DESIGNS FOR SEALS

Plate 34

I am deeply indebted to Mr. W. Floersheim for bringing to my notice, and allowing me to illustrate two strips of original Pen and Ink Drawings of Chelsea Seals. These were found in Paradise Row, Chelsea, in 1900.

When I first saw these I felt that they might lead to quite a discovery, and give a clue to some artist who drew designs for the factory, but up to the present I have discovered nothing definite.

I feel fairly certain that these two strips have been cut from a book of designs used at the factory. They are beautifully executed in pen and ink, and look like the work of a Frenchman. I know of several Chelsea Seals founded on these designs, and the modellers were evidently inspired by these drawings. Each strip bears a collector's mark J.S.A., and this mark is well known as the mark of Sir John St. Aubyn. His collection was sold on the 2nd April, 1840.

I have gone carefully through his sale catalogue and there are six lots which may have included these strips.

13.4.1840	Lot 1351	Pen sketches of figures and compositions by Ramberg (8), bought by Molteno
,,	,, 1352	Various others by the same (8), bought by Barker
,,	,, 1353	Pen sketches by Mortimer (8), bought by Molteno
,,	,, 1354	Others by ditto (8), bought by Evans
,,	,, 1355	Sheets of studies by the same (5), bought by Evans

Ramberg was born in 1763, so he was too late to have worked for the factory.

Mortimer, if it was John Hamilton Mortimer, was born 1741, died 1779, so that he could easily have designed for the factory, but his style was very different, and it is practically certain these are not his work.

Extract from " Dictionary of National Biography." Smith Elder & Co.

"He was sent to London and placed under Thomas Hudson, the master of Sir J. Reynolds and J. Wright. He studied under Cipriani, Robert Pine and Reynolds. Best known by his etchings which are executed in a bold free style. They are picturesque and spirited, but have a strong tendency to the extravagant and theatrical, some of them are studies of figures of banditti, etc., after Sabator Rosa and others, but the majority are original, and include twelve plates of characters from Shakespeare, and 'Nature and Genius introducing Garrick into the temple of Shakespeare.' He also designed some illustrations for 'Bells Theatre' and 'Bells Poets.'"

Each bears on the back in pencil what appears to be the name Picaut, and they are numbered 2269 and 2270 which I take to be a collection number, as these numbers do not correspond with Sir John St. Aubyn's sale catalogue.

They are on 18th century paper with a watermark G.R. and a bell with H.B.B. on it. The name Picaut may be the name of some unknown artist who may have designed for the Chelsea factory, but up to the present I have failed to identify him. I give these details in the hope that some one may be able to throw some light on the subject, as I look on it as a valuable clue, as we know so little about any designer or modeller working at that time for the factory.

VII. BONBONNIERES, PATCH-BOXES AND ETUIS

The majority of the Chelsea Bonbonnières are late, some belonging to the Gold Anchor Period, 1760-1769, and some to the Derby-Chelsea Period. The Cupid and Lamb was made in the Derby-Chelsea Period, as we see from Jewitt, Ceramic Art, vol. 1, p. 181. "Weekly accounts from 1770-73 : 21 Snuff-boxes of Cupid and Lamb . . . £1 4 6." The base is plain, without flowers in relief and painted a pale green, pl. 47, fig. 3. There is a 19th Century French reproduction of this model, which has flowers in relief on the base, pl. 48, fig. 1. It is hard paste with a greasy appearance, and is mounted with a porcelain lid. There were two periods of the "Billing Doves" bonbonnière, Gold Anchor Period, pl. 46 figs. 5 and 6, and Derby-Chelsea, pl. 47, fig. 4. Nearly all the bonbonnières have the interior plain white, painted with small sprigs of flowers, the inside and sometimes the outside of the rim is painted with a wavy green and blue design. I have only met with two which have been left plain white, in the form of birds' nests, pl. 51, fig. 5, with three birds peeping out. The box is elaborately built up, and has a branch running across the top bearing a ribbon on which a motto would have been inscribed, if the box had been decorated. There is a box in the Hutton Collection with two birds and their young in a nest, delicately coloured, pl. 48, fig. 4, but left plain white inside, this is unmounted as so many of the bonbonnières are. When mounted they usually have a Battersea enamel lid painted with flowers, or lids of agate, jasper, glass, etc., but I have seen no Chelsea bonbonnière with a porcelain lid. We are able to see that Chelsea patch boxes were made prior to the date 1766, from the following extract:—From the sale catalogue of a gentleman's effects sold by Mr. Christie, Dec. 1766. "Four Chelsea patch boxes neatly mounted £1 7 0." The French bonbonnières, such as Mennecy, have a uniform type of contemporary silver mount and are fitted with porcelain lids, and it is quite impossible to mistake these for Chelsea. The Etuis or needlecases are nearly all Gold Anchor Period, a few possibly earlier, and many have very elaborate gilding and intricate designs.

VIII. TOY STATUETTES

The Toy figures are very attractive, and beautifully modelled. They are extremely rare, and only fourteen different models of these are known to me. They all belong to a late period, and are fully Gold Anchor Period, and they are marked with a Red Anchor, Double Red Anchor and Gold Anchor. In spite of being marked with the Red Anchor, I am convinced that they belong to the Gold Anchor Period, and I think that the Double Red Anchor must have some significance, pointing to a period other than the Red Anchor, as I am not aware that this mark is found on pieces usually associated with this period. Some of these figures have incised letters on the base. See King, Chelsea Porcelain, pl. 47.

The type of colouring and the elaborate patterns in gold on their costumes, the green bases and flowers in relief all point to the Gold Anchor Period. The little figure of the Gallant with his hat under his arm and his companion, pl. 57, figs. 1 and 3, are founded on Meissen miniature figures. The set of the five Gardeners is most attractive, and the modelling is very good, only four are illustrated here, but the fifth, the figure of a Gardener with a rake, is illustrated by W. King, Chelsea Porcelain, on pl, 47.

I am able to illustrate three Clay Squeezes from the original moulds of three of these Toy Figures which I found during my visit to the Copeland Factory :—

A fragment of the Gallant with his hat under his arm, pl. 32, fig. 2.

The Highlander, pl. 33, fig. 21.

The Man seated writing in a book, pl. 33, fig, 17, illustrated by W. King, Chelsea Porcelain, on pl, 47.

The little figure of John Barleycorn, pl, 58, fig, 6, seated on a barrel, holding a mug of foaming ale is found as a statuette in Chelsea, and this same model was made at Bow about 1770, as a cane handle, with the addition of a sheet of music at his feet. There are two of these in the Schreiber Collection, Victoria and Albert Museum, Nos. 304 and 305, J. T. Smith, in Nollekens and his Times, Vol, II., p, 177, reports a reference to "very curious heads of canes" made at the Bow factory, in a conversation between Nollekens and the dealer Panton Betew. It is probable that Bow copied this Chelsea statuette and adapted it as a cane handle.

Tobacco-stoppers were also made at the Factory, but I think these were a late product, and probably made in the Derby-Chelsea period. I think they may also have been intended to be used as desk seals.

Plate 60

1 & 3. Scent-bottle in the form of a Cat climbing a vine, trying to catch one of two doves which are perched on branches pecking a bunch of grapes; the base is green, mounted as a seal with metal mount, the stopper is in the form of two billing-doves, with metal mount. H. 2·9 ins.

In the collection of Mrs. Meyer Sassoon.
See W. M. Binns, The First Century of English Porcelain, pl. 11.

2. Scent-bottle in the form of a figure of a Nun, with her arms folded across her breast; she stands by a tree-trunk, on a white base painted with flower sprays, the rim decorated with gold, concave underneath painted with a bouquet of flowers. There are two stoppers in the tree trunk (one missing) formed with green leaves and red berries. Red Anchor Period. H. 3·6 ins.

In the collection of Mrs. Meyer Sassoon.
Formerly in the Alfred de Rothschild Collection.
See W. King, Chelsea Porcelain, pl. 44, fig. 3.

4, 5, 6. Since going to press a Scent-bottle of simple bottle shape with the Raised Anchor mark on the base has come to light. For this interesting discovery I am indebted to Mr. W. Winkworth. This to a certain extent has upset my statement on p. 7 that no scent-bottle is known to be marked, if we can take it that this bottle was intended for use as a scent-bottle. It is undoubtedly quite a different type to those already referred to throughout this book, but it is the type one might expect to have been made in the early Raised Anchor Period, of simple form, rather large size and beautifully painted. It is smaller and different to the Raised Anchor Vase mentioned by Jewitt as a scent-bottle, and referred to on p. 7 in this work, as it has no handles, and is mounted with a silver rim to hold a stopper. I think it is as well to illustrate this, as it is of great interest, and a very rare example of this period. I give three views of this No. 5, showing the Raised Anchor mark. It is painted in colours with a castle on an island, a flag flying from the tower, a man in the foreground fishing, and a ship at anchor under the island; there are other shipping scenes painted round it. About 1750. H. 4·6 ins.

In the collection of G. E. Bryant.

Since going to press, through the courtesy of Messrs. Stoner and Evans, I am able to illustrate three rare étuis now in their possession, which form a very valuable addition to this work.

1. Etui modelled with Forget-me-nots and bound with a ribbon, with two figures of Partridges at the base, the top formed as a wheatsheaf; metal mount with the motto in gold on white enamel, "GAGE DE MA TENDRESSE." H. $4\frac{1}{2}$ ins.

2. Etui, the upper half modelled as a Jester, head and shoulders, the lower half plain white with an elaborate pattern in gold, with the motto, "L'AMOUR ME REND . . . HEUREUX." H. $4\frac{7}{8}$ ins.

3. Etui formed as a tree, modelled with flowers and foliage in colours, the top with two birds and their young in a nest, gilt metal mount, and near the base a ribbon with the motto, "GAGE DE MON AMITIE." H. $5\frac{1}{8}$ ins.
